SEEK WOMAN IN PHILA.

Eugene Leroy Sought Since
1920 for Trunk Murder
Of His Wife

DETROIT, June 20.—Fingerprints of Eugene Leroy, sought since 1920 for the trunk murder of his wife, Catherine, today were sent to Vienna for comparison with prints of Ivan Poderjay on orders of Superintendent John P. Smith. Smith said there is a marked resemblance between pictures of Poderjay and police photographs of Leroy.

Leroy disappeared before the dismembered body of his wife was found in a warehouse in New York. He has been sought in Mexico, China, and other parts of the world.

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.—The international search for Agnes C. Tufverson, missing New York and Detroit corporation lawyer, turned to Philadelphia today. Police of this city were drawn into the baffling case when it was revealed Miss Tufverson had probably come to Philadelphia from New York on the eve of a scheduled European honeymoon with Ivan Poderjay, Yugoslavian adventurer, now being held on a bigamy charge by authorities of Vienna.

Two Philadelphia detectives were assigned to co-operate with New York police in the hunt for the woman who disappeared over six months ago and who is feared the victim of foul play. At detective headquarters, International News Service was informed the two detectives were "still out on the case."

"We have uncovered nothing tangible as yet," police authorities said.

Daughter of Rev. Elsner To Speak at Newportville

NEWPORTVILLE, June 21.—On Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, Mildred Elsner, the daughter of the Rev. T. H. Elsner, pastor of the Non-Sectarian Tabernacle of Philadelphia, will speak to the Sunday School.

Miss Elsner is in her senior year at Frankford high school, and has been engaged in many activities of that school. Recently she organized a students' prayer band. These prayer bands have been started in many of the high schools throughout Philadelphia. Each Saturday morning there is a combined meeting at which time 200 or more of the students gather to broadcast their program from the non-sectarian Tabernacle over Station WRAX.

MANCHESTER, June 21.—(INS)—Admiral Sir Roger Keyes, until recently commander in chief of the British navy and now a member of Parliament, has just declared in the House of Commons that it was a mistake for Britain to cancel the Anglo-Japanese alliance. He advocates a return to it.

The admiral made his statement at a moment when the United States and Japan have entered on naval building plans of unparalleled dimensions, and a few months or at most a year before decisions will be made of historical importance for the relationships of America with Japan at the naval conference of 1935.

Lancashire does not agree with the admiral. That is one reason why America has good cause to be interested in the "plight of Lancashire."

Lancashire does not agree with the admiral because Lancashire does not like the Japanese. Lancashire does not like the Japanese because Lancashire exported seven thousand million square yards of cotton textile in 1913, four thousand million in 1924 and two thousand million last year.

Lancashire blames Japanese competition. Sir Roger Keyes is said to represent accurately the feeling of the British Admiralty in respect to Japan.

The British Admiralty is a mighty force in Britain. British school children read in Kipling's "School History of England" that "To serve King and Country in the army is the second best profession for Englishmen of all classes; to serve in the navy, I suppose we all admit, is the best."

But Lancashire is a mightier force. One quarter of the entire population of England lives within a radius of sixty miles of Manchester. It is one

COW FROM BOLTON FARM EN ROUTE TO THE ARCTIC

"Raiders Eula of Bolton" To Sail On The Ship
"Morrissey"

TO GO TO NORTH POLE

"Raiders Eula of Bolton," one of the winners of many ribbons in the Bolton Farm Guernsey herd, is enroute to the Arctic regions, her mission being to supply milk for the crew of the good ship "Morrissey."

The prize-winning cow is accompanying the expedition of Captain Robert Bartlett to Ellesmere Island, from which point the members of the expedition will go by dog team to the North Pole. The cow will remain with the crew aboard the masted schooner during the time required for the trek further North.

The animal, upon the return journey, will be presented to Captain Bartlett's mother who resides in Newfoundland, as a gift from Effingham B. Morris, president of the Academy of Natural Science, Philadelphia, which institution is sponsoring the trip.

The party will be accompanied by an ornithologist from Philadelphia and Wilmington, the expedition's purpose being to cruise along the coast of Greenland and through the Arctic regions in search of rare birds for the academy. They will study especially the great snow goose and the common brant, studying their habits, and securing specimens.

Captain Bartlett will pilot the party to the North Pole, this trip being made by dog team from Ellesmere Island.

Sufficient provisions have been stored on the "Morrissey" for two years, the party thus guarding against any misfortune which might befall it. If all goes well the trip will extend only over 210 days. The expedition left New York on June 14th.

"Raiders Eula of Bolton," which was taken to New York by truck, has just completed a fine record, during the past 365 days given 13,491 pounds of milk, and 794.9 pounds of butter fat. She is three years old, and one of the great show cows of the Bolton herd.

Participants: Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Nelson and children, Carl, Jr., George and Doris, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Goheen, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Crohe, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Flaherty, Mr. and Mrs. George Vandenberg, George Vandenberg, Jr., Miss Helen Shront, Mrs. Edna Doyle, Joseph Flaherty, Mr. and Mrs. William Gillies, Joseph Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Markley Strooper, Hugh Van Dine, Leo Crohe, Miss Vera Howard and Mr. and Mrs. David Hutchinson.

The affair was in honor of the recent marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Bray in Gloucester.

METZGER RECOMMENDS TAX SURVEY BE MADE

Suggests Five Avenues of Investigation Be Followed
To Get Facts

WANTS A NEW PLAN

(Note: This is the second of two articles presenting a discussion of the Pennsylvania tax situation by Leon D. Metzger, State Secretary of Revenue.)

HARRISBURG, June 21.—(INS)—Five avenues of investigation were recommended by Leon D. Metzger, State Secretary of Revenue, as a means of arriving at a plan for reorganizing the nation, state and local systems of tax collection.

Metzger advocated appointment of a commission for a comprehensive study of the entire tax situation, especially the federal government's encroachment on tax collecting powers of local subdivisions and the continued rise in the tax bill in the face of a continued fall in national income.

First, Metzger advocated a study of the possibility of reorganizing local government, especially overlapping, waste and duplication of functions and the possibility of eliminating some of the 5,624 units of local government in Pennsylvania.

Second, he recommended the study of the possibility of lifting some local functions to a higher plane in government. Metzger mentioned road building specifically as one function which, he said, was gradually going to the state because the state was in a position to do a better job.

Third, Metzger recommended consideration of the possibility of establishing some central state agency with jurisdiction over all tax administration, including local taxes. The ideal solution, he said, might perhaps be state supervision of tax collection through county administration.

Fourth, he suggested establishment of a uniform budget and accounting system for all political subdivisions. As an argument against the theory that local governments should be allowed to do as they pleased, Metzger pointed out that more than 2,000 municipalities are in default on their obligations.

Fifth, the State Secretary of Revenue suggested the possibility of aiding local governments reduce their debts through giving them a share in some state-administered taxes.

In conclusion, he pointed out:

"We all should realize that we have been, and still are, passing through a period of severe stress. Economic emergency measures have properly transcended in importance correct tax programs. Without criticizing too much the procedure and the remedies adopted, we should at the same time not be prejudiced from discussing frankly some of the fact situations that have followed as a result and which must be faced today.

"When top rates on federal incomes and inheritance taxes run to 59 and 69 per cent., respectively, we should recognize that growing means of legal and illegal avoidance will be devised. The consequence is a partial evaporation of state sources of revenue when state rates have not changed."

CLUB MEETS

The H. M. Club held a meeting last evening at the home of Mary Watson, Bath street. Business was discussed and a social time followed. Refreshments were served. Prizes for games were awarded to Doris VanSilver, Helen Verratti and Marion Wright. Others present were Ruth and Mary Watson.

50 KILLED IN EXPLOSION

Moscow, June 21.—Approximately 50 workmen were killed in a severe explosion which wrecked the interior of the four-story F. R. Unze chemical factory in Moscow on June 16th, International News Service learned exclusively today. It is believed the explosion may have been caused by spontaneous combustion.

A total loss. It was believed this afternoon that the death toll would not exceed four. Two women were drowned when a life boat capsized as it was being lowered into the water; and a third was injured in a pinicky rush, dying in a hospital; a fourth woman is thought to have jumped into the sea.

Before the ship finally sank today, some of the passengers had returned to it, looking for their belongings. They and members of the crew who had gone back on had plenty of warning and were safely taken off before the ship rolled over and sank. The survivors, all without extra clothing and many without money, made a pitiful picture as they clustered together at a cable office, and wired for funds.

Graduate at County
Seat Tonight

WILL PRESENT PROJECT

DOYLESTOWN, June 21.—Ninety-six seniors will be graduated tonight at Doylestown High School on the occasion of the forty-second annual commencement. This is the largest class in the history of the school and marks the graduation of a total of 1289 seniors since 1905.

Long known for its model commencement exercises that have been the subject of publication throughout the country, Doylestown High will have no commencement speaker tonight, but instead will present their thirteenth annual commencement project, a pageant—"Episodes of School Progress," presented by the senior class and others.

The eight episodes will depict the following: Enoch Flower becomes the first schoolmaster of Philadelphia, 1682; Whitefield spreads the fame of Log College, 1740; Doylestown founds her first school, 1804; a country school of 1830; the sentiment for free schools grows, 1833; Thaddeus Stevens saves the free school law, 1835; the end of the Old Academy, 1889; and commencement of 1934.

Diplomas will be presented to the graduates by William H. Satterthwaite, president of the Board of Education. Announcement of awards will be made by Dr. Carmon Ross, superintendent of the Doylestown school system, who will next year become president of Northwestern State Teachers' College, at Edinboro, after twenty-nine years as head of the local school system.

Other presentations will be made by William F. Whitenack, class president, and Franklin Hartzel, vice president of the Harlequin Players.

The complete list of graduates is as follows:

"PROGRESSIVE RADIO," SUBJECT UPON WHICH ALBERT GOLDMAN WROTE TO WIN THE PRIZE OFFERED BY MOTHERS' ASSOCIATION FOR BEST ESSAY

"Progressive Radio" was the subject of the prize winning essay written by Albert Goldman in competition for the $10 prize offered by the Bristol Mothers' Association. The essay is written without previous preparation.

"PROGRESSIVE RADIO"

By Albert Goldman

Progress means change; and perhaps nothing has changed more in such a short time than radio. Radio, as we know it today, has changed almost unbelievably since its invention—or discovery; it is difficult to say exactly which of the two it was. However, in order to clearly illustrate just how radio has progressed, it is of course necessary to point out just when and how radio began, and the circumstances leading up to its discovery.

The existence of electricity was first suspected thousands of years ago in ancient Greece. It is, indeed, a far cry from that glorious era to the present day. The Greeks found that amber, when rubbed, had certain peculiar properties. It would attract bits of paper or wood. Of course, they did not know why. But our modern term, electricity, is directly derived from the Greek word for amber, "electron."

Down through the ages the savants began to piece together, bit by bit, their knowledge of the nature of electricity. Even today there are many who are still trying to ascertain just what electricity is. The ancients discovered the magnetic properties of lodestone and other minerals. They theorized and surmised and experimented, and today, as a result, we have radio.

After the Renaissance period research continued apace. The battery was developed, due largely to the efforts of Alessandro Volta, who invented the voltaic cell. He is honored by having the unit of electricity named after him (the volt). Michael Faraday, in the Royal Laboratory at London, made immensely valuable discoveries. The unit of electrical capacitance (farad) comes from his name. Other foreign workers were Ohm and Ampere. Ohm's Law is the basis of all electrical measurements. The unit of current electricity is the ampere, and the unit of resistance is the ohm. In America Benjamin Franklin made the noteworthy discovery of the identification of lightning with electricity. Joseph Henry laid the foundation for all modern radio construction by means of his laws of inductance, reactance, and impedance.

Finally, in the eighteenth century, the field of radio began to be approached, all unknown to the scientists, of course. Joseph Maxwell and Heinrich Hertz were aware of the existence of electro-magnetic waves that could be sent through the air for some distance, even without wires. About this time, in America, Samuel Finley Breese Morse perfected the telegraph. This was a great step in the right direction. Then after having experimented for years, Guglielmo Marconi announced that he had found a way to transmit and receive wireless messages. This was late in the same century. After more experimentation the great day came. On December 12, 1901, the letter "S" was successfully transmitted across the Atlantic Ocean. Society asked no more; they knew that here was something magical, unheard of, and yet—practical.

Immense strides have been taken since then. Much credit may be given to the amateurs and experimenters, mostly youths, who from the start were bitten by the "radio bug."

The first receiving sets were those using a crystal detector. Their range was limited to about fifty miles. But in the second decade of our century

THE WORLD'S A SMALL PLACE

(By "The Stroller")

A local chemist when leaving for an extensive vacation failed to mention to his co-workers that he was about to take unto himself a wife. But the news reached Bristol before he did, coming across the wide expanses of the Atlantic, together with a newspaper photograph of he and the bride, who also happens to be a chemist.

A native of Scotland, seeing a caption in a Scottish newspaper mentioning that the groom shown was from Bristol, Pa., forwarded it to her sister, with the query "Do you know the groom?" It was soon learned at what local plant the young man was employed.

The picture of the happy couple was duly framed, and placed on the young man's desk to greet him when he returned to his duties.

came the most valuable invention that radio has yet seen. I speak of the vacuum tube. It was developed by Dr. Lee de Forest, and Dr. Forest is still living, a very famous man in the field of science.

The new sets using the audion tubes were much more sensitive and reliable. They became still more so when Armstrong brought out his circuit for regeneration in the detector tube.

But then came the War. All amateur stations were forbidden to operate. But many of the amateur operators helped to win the war by serving in the Signal Corps of the Army and the Navy. After the war the ban was lifted. The interference on the amateur bands was terrific. Everyone, or nearly everyone, was using a spark transmitter. But they all changed to tube transmitters because of their undeniable superiority.

In 1921 came the first broadcast station—KDKA in Pittsburgh. Other pioneer stations were WJZ in Newark, and WGY, the General Electric Company, in Schenectady, New York. As more and more stations came on the government stepped in and took charge with the Federal Radio Commission. International conferences were held and treaties signed. Radio had become really important.

In 1924, the amateurs were given seven short-wave bands in which to operate. These were obtained through the efforts of the American Radio Relay League, an association of amateurs. Now there are more than 1400 broadcast stations in the world, of which almost half are in this country. All the different radio stations in the world number over fifty thousand.

But broadcast stations are not the only kind of stations. There are many more, and they are to be found on the short waves, of which much is now being said by the set manufacturers. There is nothing very mysterious about the short-waves except that they behave differently from other longer waves.

The broadcast stations, such as WCAU or WLIT, operate with a signal that has a wavelength of from 200 to 545 meters. The short-waves range from 200 meters down to about 10 centimeters. Some stations that work on short-waves are the commercials, ship-to-shore stations, trans-oceanic telephone stations, airplane and airport stations, television stations, and police stations. All of these are of the utmost importance, and yet many people do not even suspect their existence.

The progress of radio may be shown by the radio tubes. A comparatively few years ago there were only two or three types. Now there are hundreds, each suited to one special task. In the latest radio sets some tubes do the

CAMP HEADS REPORT

Program, Menu, Dates and Cost Are All Submitted

DOYLESTOWN, June 21.—"Our leaders are meeting the problems of our boys in a most aggressive manner. The hundreds of hours of devoted service being rendered by our Scouters, Scoutmasters, Cubmasters, Committeemen, and others, deserve the commendation of every Bucks County citizen," said President Thomas Ross of the Bucks County Council, Executive Board at the bi-monthly meeting here.

The reorganization of the Executive Board has included the adding of a number of civic leaders to the membership. The new board members attending were Isaac J. Vanartsdalen, of Doylestown; Karl King, of Morrisville; George Knoll, of Andalusia; William Leattor, of Riegelsville, and Henry Apgar, of Finesville, N. J.

Judge Hiram H. Keller, of the Court of Honor Committee reported the advancement of the May Divisional Courts of Honor which includes 23 second class scouts, 11 first class scouts, 188 merit badges, 15 Star scouts, and three Life scouts. He announced the Fall Divisional Courts of Honor in November will be conducted at Langhorne, Richboro, and Richlandtown.

"I was very much interested in the experiences our scouts are securing at such activities as the County Overnight Scout Camporee at Bowman's Hill. It was thrilling to see the hundreds of boys gathering for the various events," said Judge Calvin S. Boyer while commenting on his experiences as speaker during the tree planting ceremonies which were a part of the annual encampment.

The report of the Camping Committee by Chairman Arthur M. Eastburn included statements on the program, menu, dates and cost of the 1934 Buccoo. Reference was made of the Regional Jamboree to be conducted at Baltimore during August. An appropriation was granted the Publicity Committee for preliminary campaign material. The report of Chairman Dr. A. J. Strathie referred to plans for the Doylestown Fair, the fall financial campaign, two special dramatization committees for the County Council Meeting, and Boy Scout Anniversary Week. It was recommended that special demonstrations of life saving, campcraft, and other features be demonstrated at Buccoo on visiting days.

Walter Pitzonka, of Bristol, Chairman of the Training Committee, announced the Buccoo week-end training camp will be held Saturday, 7 p. m. (d. s. t.) over to Sunday 4 p. m. (d. s. t.) The work of the Organization Committee during the past months under Chairman William Burgess has centered around the six-district plan of reorganization, and the approval of the 1935 Scoutcraft Meet events. The Camp Committee led by Chairman Henry Palmer, of Langhorne, has during the past two months surveyed the drainage needs, and necessary road improvements to be made at Buccoo camp. The hillside road has been scraped, two new drains have been placed, and a number of drainage ditches have been dug.

"If the delinquent pledges, and the pledges due on July 1st are paid, we will complete 1934 within our budget," said Finance Chairman Edmund H. Lovett, of Yardley, during his report on his audit of the council books. All finance records were reported on by Mr. Lovett, as having been correct. Important items relative to the bond issue were discussed. It has been decided to have the annual solicitation for council maintenance to begin on Saturday, October 6th, and conclude on Sunday, October 14th. A larger soliciting organization is going to be developed, so that, each solicitor will have fewer prospects to see.

Scout Executive William F. Livermore reported the six district boards had been reorganized. The Scout Executive spoke of the progress of Scouting both in the county, and as reported at the recent National Council meeting in Buffalo. It was announced the Sea-scout Water Fete will be conducted at Morrisville on Saturday, June 30th, 2.30 p. m. (d. s. t.) It will consist of individual swimming, diving, and life saving competitions.

GROWTH OF RURAL DELIVERY

It is 37 years since rural free delivery was introduced. Great caution was exhibited in trying out the idea. It had been advocated for a number of years, but aroused interest slowly on the part of those destined to benefit most by it. Evidently congress did not grasp its possibilities, for there was reluctance to appropriate the funds to give it a trial. At first but three routes were established as an experiment. The spread of the idea was not speedy, but when it finally was realized that it possessed virtue, demands came in great volume for the establishment of additional routes.

Of course, the adoption of the plan resulted in a frightful slaughter of fourth-class postmasterships and no small part of the earlier opposition to the extension of the system came from these officers. Their objection could be understood easily. Discontinuance of the post-offices meant financial loss to them. Yet, the benefit to the dwellers on farms accruing from daily receipt of mail without having to go after it, sometimes far, is immeasurable. The rural free delivery is one of a trio of facilities removing isolation from the farm. It does not take a subordinate position to the other two—the telephone and the automobile.

It is significant, too, that all three of these means of facilitating communication between farm and town were fairly coincident in arrival. All three may be credited with accelerating the march of progress—if any one excels the other in value it is the rural free delivery.

RUSSIAN GOLD

If claims made by Soviet officials are borne out, the world soon may find relief from the gold shortage from which it has been suffering.

The production of gold in Russia, according to M. Serebrovsky, chief of the gold industries, already surpasses that of both the United States and Canada and is second only to that of the Transvaal. Production last year had increased to 100,000,000 gold rubles, which would be more than $100,000,000 at the present official rate of exchange. It represents twice the annual production before the revolution. The American output last year was $45,877,085, while Canada produced $63,061,106 and the Transvaal $238,930,062.

Gold-mining methods in the Soviet union have been greatly improved in recent years. One of the drawbacks to increased production is lack of transportation facilities, but these can be provided. Officials indicate it will be done.

If Russia's gold resources are as great as claimed by the mining industries chief, the Soviet would seem to have at hand an effective answer to the foreign credit blockade. It remains to be seen how the claims pan out.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

"Please don't go," cried Diane. "Don't leave me alone with him. You couldn't do such a thing."

Jeff took a step toward his henchman. "Git!"

Lem, grinning, bowed toward the girl with exaggerated courtesy. "You can see how hit is, miss. We an jest natchally bound to do like Jeff says."

He was turning to go when Jeff halted him with: "You done told me as how you could run an automobile, didn't you, Lem?"

"Sure did, boss."

"Wal, then, you can run that machine what's standin' in front of the house into the barn. Diane an' me ain't goin' to need hit tonight."

When Lem was gone Jeff continued to Diane:

"Mebbe you can see now who's runnin' things 'round hyear. If Ann Haskel knows what's good fer her, she ain't never goin' to show up in this neighborhood no more 'rom now on this hyear's goin' to be a man's country."

While Diane, dumb with terror, watched, he went to the table and poured a dirty glass half-full of liquor from the jug. With the glass in one hand and the jug in the other he approached her.

"Hyear you be. Have a drink. Hit's good hicker. I know 'cause I made hit."

Too frightened to refuse, she took the glass, staring at him with horror-stricken eyes.

With a laugh he raised the jug toward his lips. "Wal, hyear's look in' at you," he jeered, and drank.

With a sudden desperate cry the girl dropped the glass and dashed for the door. But before she could raise the bar he caught her and whirled her back halfway across the room.

"You may's well take hit easy, gal," he drawled. "Cause you sure ain't a-goin' nowhar till I say you 'an. That ain't no use of you a-yellin', neither, 'cause don't nobody nase nolonger this road now."

Cent old Jim Cartwright, an' he ain't a-goin' to come by tonight. He war at the store this evenin' an' I seed him a-goin' home 'bout an hour 'fore sundown. I done tried all summer to be friends with you, but you jest wouldn't have hit that way. Best you could expect do war to say in the bresh an' watch you an' 'erb. I sure got my chance now, an' I 'low I'll jest make up fer all I've missed. So you may's well make yoursef right to home with me, honey, jest like you done with Herb that night when you an' him war caught out in the bresh."

He swung the jug upward for another drink. But with his face upturned and the jug almost touching his lips he stopped as if suddenly turned to stone.

Diane, wondering, saw a look of amazement and fear come over his face. His eyes were fixed on something behind her, his mouth agape, he seemed paralyzed as if at sight of some apparition.

The girl whirled about. Ann Haskel was standing in the kitchen doorway, with Nance Jordan, like a faithful hound, close behind.

The mountain woman was wearing her old backwoods costume—a shapeless dress of dingy black, with black cotton stockings and heavy shoes. A black bonnet hung over her shoulders by its strings. Her black hair, streaked with gray, was drawn back from her scowling brow in a slovenly knot. Her face was set hard and grim, and her black eyes gleamed like two points of icy light. Even at that moment of almost hysterical relief Diane thought of the regally beautiful woman she had seen standing at the foot of the stairway in the old Carroll house.

The overwrought girl wanted to cry out, to throw herself into the mountain woman's arms. But there was something about Ann Haskel, as she stood there silently facing Jeff Todd, which checked her. She could have gone to the Ann Haskel who smiled at her so kindly the night of the party, and who thanked her so understandingly for the part she was playing in that affair. But this Ann Haskel with the hard, uncompromising frown and the dangerous light in her eyes was different. In the wave of emotion which swept over her she could only struggle silently for self-control.

After what seemed a long time Ann spoke:

"Ss, you're 'low'n' as how you air

a-runnin' things 'round these parts, be you, Jeff Todd?"

Without shifting his gaze from the mountain woman's face, Jeff stepped slowly backward and put his jug on the table.

Ann, watching his every movement, continued, musingly: "I allus knowed I war makin' a mistake not kiltin' you. I've let you live on account of me an' your paw bein' married, I reckon, but hit war sure poor judgment."

The backwoodsman kept his eyes upon her with the wary, fearful manner of a trapped animal.

They seemed to have forgotten Diane's presence.

"I been a-listenin' at the winder there quite a spell," Ann went on grimly. "When that fool Lem went you didn't have sense 'nough to fasten the back door, so me an' Nance we jest come on in. Now I'm hyear, you'd best git out."

Jeff edged cautiously toward a rifle which stood against the wall between the book-corner window and the door.

Ann's eyes followed him, but she did not move.

When he was within reach of the weapon Jeff spoke:

"Things has changed a heap in these parts, Ann Haskel. I'm a-tellin' you that you can't come back hyear an' do like you allus done before you went away."

He caught up the rifle. "An' I'm a-shovin' you right now that you can't."

The mountain woman came two steps into the room. "Hyear I be," she said, dryly.

Jeff slowly raised his weapon, and she went another step toward him.

"You can't do hit, Jeff Todd. You know good an' well you can't. You ain't got the guts to shoot me 'cept in these parts, Ann Haskel. I'm a-tellin' you that you can't come back hyear an' do like you allus done before you went away."

He caught up the rifle. "An' I'm a-shovin' you right now that you can't."

eyes flashed with the old Carroll spirit. "Do you really think me capable of running away and leaving you under the circumstances, Mrs. Haskel?"

The mountain woman shot a triumphant glance at Nance Jordan and laughed softly. "Hit's Gawd's truth, honey, I war plum certain you wouldn't be a-quittin', once you had your second thought. Whatever ideas I've been a-holdin' 'bout you, I ain't never figgered you war the kind that could do such as that. I'm beginnin' to see, too, from the way you done at the party, that a lot of my ideas 'bout you mightn't be so right as I 'lowed they war."

British Coal Is Coming Back; Also Steel, Consumer Trades

of the most densely populated areas in the world. Within it are concentrated industries which account for perhaps half of the industrial production of the country.

Therefore, despite Sir Rogers Keyes, and within a few weeks of his declaration, the British Board of Trade. Acting under pressure from Lancashire, imposed upon Japanese imports into British colonies quota restrictions calculated to check further sales of Japanese textiles in British markets. The quotas were the first implication by Britain of unmistakable discrimination against an individual nation. They constitute a declaration of trade war.

By far the most important of Lancashire's industries is cotton spinning and weaving. Even the minimum of two thousand million square yards of exports was the largest single export of Britain. It represented in value one-sixth of the total exports of Britain and twice the amount of the next most important industry. No study of British recovery can ignore the position of the industry that produces the greatest export of the greatest exporting country.

British coal is coming back, steel is booming, consumer trades are flourishing. But cotton exports are not coming back. In the first quarter of this year cotton piece goods exports had the mournful distinction of being one of the few posts on the declining side of Britain's foreign trade ledger. They fell off by $4 and 45 million square yards as against the first quarter of 1933 and 1932.

Meanwhile Japanese exports rose from 1,413 million yards in 1931 to 2,990 millions yards in 1933, and in the first four months of this year they went steadily upward.

Lancashire's rage is expressed in typically Lancashire fashion. It is now virtually impossible for a Lancashire speaker on the Japanese question to begin without the preface: "I hope nobody will accuse me of extremism or panic-mongering."

Then follows a demonstration. The speaker holds in his hands five cloths. The first is a printed cotton exported to Singapore. The Japanese price is $1.60 for 30 yards; the lowest possible English price is $3.31. The second is an artificial silk cloth. The Japanese price is under four cents a yard; the British price nine cents a yard. And so on with the Japanese price on an average one-half of the British price.

Especially angry are the Lancashire men at the fact of Japanese currency depreciation. It is true that Japan went off gold, but she only did so three months after Britain did. The yen dropped 50 per cent. But sterling dropped 35 per cent., so the net difference was only 15 per cent. in favor of Japanese cheapness. This could not possibly explain the 50 per cent. cheaper Japanese prices.

But the Lancashire audience for the most part pays a little attention to this consideration. They listen to the speaker with drawn faces. In slum houses around 90,000 jobless textile workers make an unseen audience. When after a year of negotiations between Lancashire and Japan for a world trade agreement, the negotiations were broken off, and Britain slapped on the anti-Japanese quotas, and Lancashire cheered.

Yet the Japanese are neither wholly nor even chiefly to blame. Comparative statistics show that the Japanese could not have taken away more than 300,000,000 yards per year of exports from the British. And the new British trade war, it is estimated, can shut out a maximum of only 50,000,000 yards of Japanese goods from British markets.

To blame is also the fact that while Lancashire machine manufacturers were exporting the latest mill equipment to Japan, Lancashire itself remained contented with equipment 90 per cent. of which is over twenty years old, as a recent survey by John Ryan showed.

These factors plus the cheap living standards of Eastern workers whose weekly wages averaged a fraction of the dole paid to unemployed British textile workers have obviously settled the fate of the cotton textile export industry of Britain. It may retain its present level, or even better it slightly by wholesale scrapping of redundant plant. Modernization of the remainder, and re-organization of the entire industry to eliminate wasteful competition. Realistic leaders of the industry are reconciled to the prospect of never regaining the old level of 7,000 million yards export, and they speak with faint hope of even getting back to the 1934 level of 4,000 million.

Does that mean an insuperable impediment to full British recovery? Probably not. It means that a gigantic shifting of labor power and of capital will have to take place. New industries will have to absorb the surplus of cotton operatives. They are already doing so to a slight degree. Besides textiles, Lancashire makes glass, chemicals, soap, iron, wire, engines, machinery, tools, electric motors, cables, leather, felt hats, paper, tires, oil cloth and a score of other things.

All these branches are looking up. Just as the new machines slowly gave work to the hand-weavers who at first sought to burn the devilish inventions 100 years ago, so today, slowly the unemployed textile workers are being taken up by the trades that have sprung to life behind Britain's tariff wall. This at any rate is the optimistic prospect held out by organizations in Lancashire busy promoting the change-over.

Until this process is completed, the textile jobless, like the jobless coal miners, will continue to be supported as they have been in the past on the dole—fed by the surplus of more fortunate industries.

The cloud over textiles makes Lancashire a gloomy patch on the panorama of British recovery. Dickens might have been thinking of the melancholy that hangs over Manchester today when he wrote a description of the Lancashire of his time:

"The rain fell, and the smoke-serpents, submissive to the curse of all that tribe, trailed themselves upon the earth. In the waste-yard outside, the steam from the escape pipe, the litter of barrels and old iron, the shining heaps of coal, the ashes everywhere, were shrouded in a veil of mist and rain."

Meanwhile Lancashire will continue to dislike the Japanese.

STRAW RIDE

Twenty-eight members of Bristol high school economics club and their friends enjoyed a straw ride last evening to Morrell's Farm, Emile. The party was chaperoned by Mrs. Addie Culver, Philadelphia. Barn dancing, ball room dancing, games and refreshments were enjoyed. Music was furnished by a phonograph.

men! Around Forty

Are you all fat? If you lack energy, lose sleep, feel nervous and physically unfit, you should begin treatment at once with PERSEICO, the powerful tonic containing four animal gland extracts with other ingredients, properly balanced to renew normal action of vital forces. Remember! You are only as vigorous as your glands. PERSEICO arouses weak glands. It is the logical treatment for men who realize they need an agent of this kind. Ask for circular.

work of three or four tubes. That sounds strange, but it is true, nevertheless.

Radio is used to keep expeditions, such as Byrd's, in contact with civilization when nothing else is possible. The same is true in emergencies, when transportation and communication lines have been cut off. Amateurs have done brave work in this connection.

But radio marches on. It changes so quickly that one can hardly keep up with the pace of the startling inventions. The future will no doubt bring the wireless transmission of power, on which Nikola Tesla is now working, remote control of apparatus, and real television for everybody.

It seems all so wonderful, when one thinks back only twenty-odd years to the days when radio was in its infancy, so to speak, and then compares them with our modern times, and then just imagines what is coming. The future of radio is naturally always uncertain, but we may be sure that it will always continue to make itself more and more entertaining, useful, and indispensable to everyone on this earth.

SHORT CUTS TO THE DINNER TABLE

By Miss Vera A. Schneider

We're approaching the busiest day of the week, the busiest day, that is, insofar as menu planning is concerned, and that day, of course, is Saturday. The routine of the week is broken—boy scout son is off for a week-end hike;

the growing daughter will spend the afternoon in the swimming pool, while father finds it necessary to cut the hedge and keep everlastingly at the weeds. So, on Saturday, it is mother's puzzle to serve her family relishing dishes punctually that no time may be lost in the following of the various pursuits. First, the lunch box for the boy scout, and what boy would not be thrilled to find within his kit a good man-sized ham sandwich or a beef bologna sandwich, or liverwurst? Of course, you mothers of growing boys and girls know just how big the appetites of the children are, and especially so when they're hiking in the open all day. They fairly eat you out of house and home, don't they? So make those sandwiches huge. Then put into the kit the thermos bottle full of good wholesome milk, and, of course, homemade cake and fruits. I'm going to give you a recipe for a good cake and one that is no trouble and not expensive. It's a sour cream cake, and while we seldom gather together an accumulation of sour cream, nevertheless, it might be possible that there is a cupful in your refrigerator waiting for some good samaritan to come along and make good use of it.

Sour Cream Cake

- 1 cupful sugar
- 2 eggs—beaten until light and lemon colored
- 1 cupful thick sour cream
- 1/2 teaspoonful soda
- 2 cupfuls flour
- 2 teaspoonfuls baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoonful salt
- 1/4 teaspoonful vanilla

Beat eggs until light and lemon colored and add sugar gradually. Add the soda to the sour cream and stir rapidly until foamy. Add the egg and sugar mixture and the vanilla. Sift together the dry ingredients, that is the flour, baking powder and salt, and add to the sugar mixture, stirring until smooth. Bake in a well greased loaf pan in a 375 degree oven from 45 to 60 minutes.

Now that's an easy recipe that can be literally "slung" together and yet it is going to be so enjoyed by the children that you'll just love to make it for them.

A good icing for this cake would be caramel, and so that you may have the recipe complete, I'll give you an easily made caramel icing.

Caramel Icing

- 2 cupfuls brown sugar
- 3/4 cupful cream

2 tablespoonfuls butter

Pinch of salt.
Combine ingredients and boil until the mixture forms a soft ball in cold water, stirring constantly. Cool, beat until creamy and spread on cake. When testing the icing be sure that the ball formed in cold water is just firm enough to hold together, otherwise the frosting will be too hard.

ST. ANN'S NINE WINS WITH DE RISI AT BAT

By T. M. Juno

The first half of the Bristol Twilight League came to a close last night on Leedom's field as the St. Ann's A. A. nine took into camp the Hibernians by the score of 7-4. The Saints finished in third place in the league-standings.

Taking advantage of Hibernian misplays gave the Saints the victory. They started off in the first inning with three runs which were made on but one scratch hit. Of the runs scored by both teams, none were earned.

The Big Green made seven errors but played in flashes. Two double-plays checked off the 1933 champions and prevented them from adding to their score. The winners had three errors chalked against them.

"Mike" DeRisi, received credit for the triumph. His fast ball had the Hibs swinging all night. Only five blows were made by the losers and ten players went down via the strike-out method. He issued but one pass and with the exception of the third inning never was in danger.

"Mink" Warner, southpaw twirler of the losers, allowed seven hits and with better support might have earned a victory. His slow hook fooled five St. Ann's batters on strikes and three times he put a runner on base by passing him.

The Saints scored three times in the first. With Fields out, DiBlassio rolled to Flynn who errored. Piec then beat out a bunt. Dougherty missed Oriola's grounder and DiBlassio scored. Angelo hit to F. Dougherty and Piec was safe at the plate when W. Dougherty missed the throw home. Angelo stole second. DeRisi rolled out to first, Oriola counting. Manzo walked but Stallone fanned.

In the third two more went to the Saints. "With one out, Oriola doubled to right-center. Angelo hit to Cooper who missed. DeRisi fanned. Manzo's fly fell behind short for a single, registering Oriola and Angelo.

The Hibs' best inning was their half of the third. McClafferty opened by beating out a tap in front of the plate. Warner hit to Piec who threw to second but Stallone ran over the bag and the runners declared safe. Connors planted a hit to right, scoring McClafferty and Warner. W. Dougherty flied to left. Roe hit the breezes with three strikes. F. Dougherty tripled to center, scoring Connors. Cooper doubled to right, and Dougherty crossed. Flynn grounded out.

The last two runs of the game came in the sixth. Stallone took two bases on F. Dougherty's error. Conti singled to left, scoring Stallone. Fields and DiBlassio skied to left. Piec bounced to Dougherty but Roe missed the throw, scoring Conti.

Insured One Month - Then Dead

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilezinski on February 18, 1934, was insured in "The Industrial" on March 12, 1934, and the baby died April 14, 1934. The baby was only two months old and had been insured one month. Our company paid the claim—$200—in full as soon as the proofs of death were submitted to us. The check was payable to the mother.

This incident shows the uncertainty of life. You cannot afford to be without life insurance. It costs so little—but in an emergency does so much. Send for our agent.
